Pieter Bruegel the Elder at the outset, in his graphic works, succeeded his fellow-countryman Jheronimus Bosch:
moral, allegoric and religious themes, proverbs, rural images and landscapes, scenes of peasant's life, slightly surrealistic presentation of reality, etc., literally reaching its highest point on his 2 masterpieces, both called:
The Tower of Babel.
